

KC startup caps year with $900K funding boost

Leslie Collins, Staff Writer - Kansas City Business Journal

Dec 28, 2018, 7:53am EST

Image: Dan Videtich

Dan Videtich

Dominique Davison is CEO and founder of PlanIT Impact.

PlanIT Impact is capping 2018 with a $900,000 funding boost, helping it make key enhancements to its

The Kansas City startup built software geared toward architects, engineers and contractor teams that arms them with actionable insights on building performance aspects such as water usage and energy efficiency. Some of PlanIT Impact's early adopters include area heavyweights like JE Dunn Construction, BNIM and Gould Evans.

PlanIT Impact closed its two seed rounds in April and September, which included investors such as Kansas City-based Target Hill Capital, Bulldog Innovation Group and local investors in the engineering and construction fields. The funding also included a $100,000 match from the Missouri Technology Corp.

Dominique Davison is the founder and CEO of PlanIT Impact, which was a 2017 winner in LaunchKC global grants competition, receiving a $50,000 grant along with a year of free office space in downtown Kansas City and with mentoring and professional services.

You can read more about the startup's progress and where it's headed here.